The ASAN
Gulf Coast
Food & Farm
Guide

ASAN loves Alabama agriculture!

We believe that Alabama families deserve really good, freshly farmed local food, whether purchased directly from farms or eaten at a restaurant.

To that end, we offer this series of Food and Farm Guides, which highlights the farms and growers of Alabama, as well as the restaurants serving local produce.

In addition to the great taste and the satisfaction of knowing your food comes from, locally grown food offers health benefits over the highly processed and conveniently fast foods that have been shown to contribute to the near epidemic of obesity we are seeing, especially in Alabama's precious children.

When you purchase standard supermarket or fast food fare, you send your money out of the community and out of the state. When you choose to buy locally grown meats and produce, you support local employment and local businesses of all kinds, while enhancing the governmental tax base.

Not all food from sources listed in this guide are strictly or certifiably "organic," but all meet strict standards of quality and safety. The guide does indicate which farms and restaurants offer USDA certified organic or Certified Naturally Grown™ food.

ABOUT ASAN

Alabama Sustainable Agriculture Network

ASAN is a statewide 501c3 nonprofit organization dedicated to promoting development of community food systems in Alabama that will conserve natural resources, support our Family farmers, and provide access to healthy and nutritious food for all citizens.

To that end, ASAN:

- Provides direct technical support to farmers wanting to grow for a local market.
- Strives to increase public awareness of the economic, environmental and health benefits of locally-grown and organic or naturally-grown food.
- Supports local and regional grassroots organizations that support sustainable farmers and community food systems, providing an effective network of mutual assistance and information sharing.

Funding for ASAN's work is provided by donations from individuals, companies and community-based organizations who recognize and value the services we provide; and by grants from various USDA agencies, the Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries, and private foundations such as Heifer International and the Ford Foundation.

Funding for this food guide was provided by the Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries through the USDA Specialty Crop Block Grant program.
